WHEREAS, substance abuse, addiction, and homelessness are pervasive issues that affect individuals, families, and communities across the nation, resulting in negative impacts on health, economic stability, and community well-being; and

WHEREAS, faith-based organizations, through recovery programs, have provided vital resources and life-transforming support to individuals facing these challenges, helping them reclaim their lives through spiritual healing, personal accountability, and community engagement; and

WHEREAS, faith-based recovery programs that focus on promoting spiritual renewal have demonstrated success in transforming lives through faith, providing comprehensive services that include shelter, counseling, and long-term rehabilitation; and

WHEREAS, many of these faith-based programs operate independently, relying on private donations, community support, and volunteer efforts without dependence on government funding, thereby preserving their mission and values; and

WHEREAS, these faith-based recovery programs have made substantial, positive impacts in reducing homelessness, lowering recidivism, and fostering lasting recovery and societal reintegration; and
